Write a C++ program to accomplish the following:

1) Read a sequence of integers from a file into an array
2) Pass that array of integers to a function which will compute and return the average (as a double).
3) Display the average returned from the function.

You don't know in advance how many integers will be in the file, but it will be less than 100.